SUBSCRIPTIONS CANCELLED IN WAR PROTEST

Little Magazine Refuses Sales
To Universities Researching
Chemical, Germ Warfare

The little magazine The Sixties has added a new wrinkle to war protest by refusing to sell subscriptions to the libraries of universities which have Army or CIA contracts for research on chemical and bacteriological warfare. Some 32 university libraries which were subscribing to The Sixties have been notified that their subscriptions have been cancelled, and an appropriate refund has been returned.

The editors in each case sent a letter to the library and the president's office of each institution, expressing their feelings after reading two articles in the New Republic on the topic of CBW (Chemical and Biological Warfare), for which the institutions have been accepting study grants.

The college libraries thus spurned by The Sixties include Brown, California at Berkeley, Colorado, Chicago, Connecticut, Delaware, Duke, Harvard, Hawaii, Indiana, Johns Hopkins, Louisiana State, Massachusetts, Michigan, Ohio State, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Purdue, Rutgers, St. Louis, Stanford, Tennessee, Texas, Tulane, Washington, Western Reserve, West Virginia, William and Mary, Wisconsin, and Yale.
